

Henry Louey

ICT educator, public speaker and business development executive. Henry has over 20 years experience in all facets of the ICT education and training sector - both locally and abroad.

As an educator, Henry has designed and implemented a number of programs with colleges and universities across the region to help align industry certification into core school curriculum

As a public speaker and writer, Henry has been an industry speaker at many I.T conferences and has spoken on topics such as Cloud Computing, Security; Identity Management & Green I.T. Henry has authored a number of articles for ICT industry publications, as well as published papers on ICT Career Pathways and industry frameworks.

In business development, Henry has been successful in growing and developing new opportunities in local and international markets. He has large account sales experience and is Miller Heimann trained.

Henry is responsible for expanding the ACS professional certifications portfolio and growing the number of ICT professionals holding an ACS professional certification. This involves high level advocacy within government policy environments, and business development at the 'C' suite level in B2B and B2G sales environments.

Henry holds a Bachelor of Science (Computing & Maths) Degree from Deakin University

Contact: Henry Louey, Director - Certification
Company: Australian Computer Society (ACS)
Email: henry.louey@acs.org.au
Phone: +61-3-96908000
Base: Australia
Area served: Australia, Worldwide